

Technical, Environmental, Health and Safety due diligence

Is your company undergoing a merger or acquisition? These not only requires the matching of financial or legal aspects, but technical and environmental guarantees as well. Vinçotte would be happy to help you carry out the necessary investigations to reduce uncertainties in this context.

Your tailor-made solution

To provide you with a comprehensive understanding of all your risks, our experts carry out a due diligence study during the negotiation process between the two parties. The target company is closely audited during this process and all risks are identified, thereby reducing your insecurities. We handle projects quickly and discretely and offer a wide range of services within a national and international environment.

There are three domains in which Vinçotte can carry out due diligence: Health & Safety and Technical due diligence. Environmental experts closely examine the risk prone parameters.

Welfare and safety are viewed from the point of view of the workplace and in relation to the environment. Have all the laws been complied with? And in case of a company covered under Seveso (European Directive on the risks of industrial accidents), are all the safety reporting requirements satisfied? The technical services primarily relate to the state of the building. This may be the structure, the technical installations, the terrain/premises, etc. We examine all these risks for you.

An M&A (Merger & Acquisition) consultant will provide support for each project, and he will act as the contact person who comes up with solutions. He is advised by a team of specialists who are authorities in their own fields. This approach guarantees efficiency and well-supported projects.
